FOREWORD

A WORK such as this requires of a "Foreword" little by way of explanation or introduction. Though not, like Cromwell's Warrant, written "in plain characters enough," yet its contents carry their own explanation and justification.

The law is built upon preserved memorials, and while portraits of those who are administering the law of the present, and at the same time shaping the law of the future, may add nothing to the structure itself, they do add to the interest with which that structure is to be seen and studied.

The Reports record the work of our judges, of our counsel, and to some extent of our solicitors, but those practical volumes afford no place for the portraits of their real authors. That lack, the present volume to some extent, seeks to supply.

Osgoode Hall contains splendid canvas bearing the countenances of the Justices who have made the administration of the law in the Province of Ontario famous and respected, yet such paintings are necessarily limited in scope and number. Such a volume as this not only preserves the portraits of great men who have passed away, but it gives opportunity for the reproduction of the features of all those who labor together in the legal field. For who shall say which is the greater—where each works at the same time and towards the same end—though the opportunity of one be larger than the opportunity of another?

The records of the Bench and Bar of Ontario are unsurpassed. The profession has been crowded with broad minds and intelligent men since the Act of 1794 authorized the Governor to license advocates and attorneys in the newly-born Province; and since 1822 when the "Treasurers and Benches of the Law Society" were formally incorporated. The long line of accomplished and forceful Chief Justices, from William Osgoode, friend and legal adviser to Governor Simcoe, down to the present time, is creditable to the profession, to the Province and to the race. No Ontario profession can boast of a more brilliant and progressive record. The strongest proof of this is the unbroken confidence of the people in the quality of the justice which has been administered. That the laws of Ontario are unexcelled is due to the many generations of lawyers and judges who have contributed of their knowledge and intelligence to build up in this Dominion, on British foundations, a system which is a worthy part of the jurisprudence of the greatest of modern empires.

The thanks of the authors are due to many members of the Bench who gave their assistance and encouragement to the work, and especially to that portion of the work including the portraits of deceased judges; to the Law Society for its permission to make use of the portraits in Osgoode Hall; to George A. Boomer for the loan of his collection of portraits of the judges; to many other members of the profession for assisting in procuring individual portraits of some of such judges. The editors have only to express their regret that they have not been able, with so much kind assistance, to make complete their collection of such portraits.
